ANTHONY COMSTOCK NOTED VICE CRUSADER, DIES OF PNEUMONIA

Man Known All Over World as Guardian of Morality Passes Away After Short Illness

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Anthony Comstock, secretary of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, known the world over through the controversies following his crusades against questionable and indecent books, pictures and plays, died at night, at the age of 71 years, after an illness of 10 days, which ended in pneumonia.

His illness was brought on by overwork and overexcitement resulting from his fight to retain his position as postal inspector, which he had held since his appointment by President Grant in 1873 and from his successful efforts to convict William Sanger, of having violated the Criminal Code in giving away a copy of "Family Limitation," a booklet written by Mrs. Margaret Sanger.

On September 10 Mr. Comstock took a heated part in the court proceedings in the Sanger case, which ended after a fine of $50 had been imposed on Sanger, in hearing and shouting by Alexander Berkman, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn and others, chiefly anarchists. Mr. Comstock, who in his excitement had talked without permission of the Court, was allowed to speak before the close of the trial, and he shouted that he had been told that he would be shot unless he dropped the prosecution of the case. The day after this scene in court Mr. Comstock was ill with an intermittent fever, which finally ended pneumonia.

WORRIED OVER HOLDING POSITION Great worry was caused Mr. Comstock in June by repeated reports from Washington that he was to be relieved of his position as postal inspector and other officials that he should be ousted because of the many antagonisms he had caused from his position as secretary of the Society for the Suppression of Vice. Mr. Comstock charged that there was a conspiracy at the Federal Building in this city to procure his dismissal, and he appealed directly to Washington. In July, after he had received assurances that he would be retained in his position, "The right must prevail. I knew all along the plans of the miserable schemers plotting to oust me would fail."

While few persons have attempted to criticize Mr. Comstock for his efforts to suppress books and pictures manifestly intended to be sold chiefly for their licentious character, he had been the center of controversy during most of the 35 years of his career as an executive of the differences of opinion over what constituted the dividing line between indecency and art. The fact that blanks occur in the translated pages of Zola, of Boccaccio and of many modern and ancient classics is due to Mr. Comstock. He protested against the appearance of many plays here, notably "Mrs. Warren's Profession," George Bernard Shaw was added to the long list of authors who were criticized who have exercised their talents on the suppression of Vice.

ACTIVITY CALLED "ADVERTISING." Where public opinion and the courts held that Mr. Comstock had been wrong in finding evil in what purported to be advertising in the world, "September Morn" is the most recent instance. In May, 1911, Mr. Comstock threatened to arrest a dealer who had the advertisement in the "September Morn" original by Paul Chabas on exhibition. The arrest was never made, but the public was soon given a chance to decide whether "September Morn" was art or not, because some hundreds of thousands of lithographic reproductions were in a few weeks on sale in stores in every part of the United States.

The hard work which Mr. Comstock did, day in and day out, attracted less attention, because there was no chance to ridicule it. Every year, with the help of his staff and the police, he confiscated tons of printed matter which the owners were in no position to defend.

Up to 1914 Mr. Comstock had caused the imprisonment in State and Federal Courts in 1867 persons, of which 7740 either pleaded guilty or were convicted. In these cases fines were imposed to the extent of $27,134.30 and imprisonment to the length of 665 days, 11 months and 20 days. Several hundred arrests and several thousand dollars in fines were added in 1914 and 1915.

AMERICA CAN GET MUCH WOOL FROM ENGLAND

Britain Can Spare 125,000 Bales, but It Must Not Go to Enemies

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Consul General Skinner at London today cabled the State Department that 125,000 bales of wool, including 50,000 bales of English wool, can be spared this year for export to the United States.

Applications for licenses to export crossbred and similar wools to the United States will be considered by the British Government, he says. The understanding is that all of this wool must be consigned to the United States Textile Alliance, which has agreed to see that the wool is not reshipped to England's enemies.

The wool will be shipped under the terms of the agreement reached as the result of last autumn's conferences between Ambassador Page and the British Foreign Office.

KEYSTONE-ELECTRIC PLAN TO BE OPPOSED

City to Fight Ratification of Conduits' Lease to Lighting Company

Director Cooke, of the Department of Public Works, and City Solicitor Ryan have completed arrangements for the part the city will play in opposing the lease of the conduits of the Keystone Telephone Company to the Philadelphia Electric Company. The city's legal representatives will be present at the meeting at Harrisburg tomorrow, at which an effort will be made to have the Public Service Commission ratify the lease.

The city authorities, with no desire to harass the public service companies, but with a view to preventing any action that might stifle competition, will oppose the combine of underground wires from a number of standpoints. After a careful perusal of the agreement between the utility concerns, the officials will base their opposition on the wide general ground that such an agreement would be against public policy. The fact that the City Council or the Mayor were not consulted before the plan to stifle future competition was agreed upon is an additional ground for the interference planned by the city.

The lease for which ratification is sought gives the Electric Company the right to a long-term lease and later the right to purchase all conduit space used. The Keystone Electric Company has 125 miles of its conduits that cover about 325 miles of city streets. Director Cooke is of the opinion that such a lease would give the Electric Company such an advantage over all possible competitors as to act as an agreement in the restraint of business.
